

A Referendum for Natural Remedies

The protection of our health is one of the most fundamental human rights and yet, every year, millions of Europeans die from preventable health problems like heart attacks, strokes and cancer.

Scientific findings have shown that these diseases (and many others) can be prevented using side-effect free natural remedies. To date, over 10,000 studies have been published in the scientific press and on the Internet demonstrating the vital importance of vitamins and other natural remedies.

However, laws are being introduced at national and European levels which will ban free access to this vital health information and to non-patentable natural remedies, such as vitamins.

Nobody should have the power to endanger our right to good health and long life. We must ensure that we exercise our citizens' rights to protect our health and safeguard our lives.

We call upon the European Union to protect the fundamental right to good health of all citizens.

We appeal to all responsible politicians in the European Union to carry out a 'Referendum for Natural Remedies' to guarantee every citizen in Europe the right to free and unrestricted access to vitamin therapies and other natural remedies.

We call on the governments of Europe to enshrine the right to referendums in their national constitutions.
